

João E. Mutondo

João E. Mutondo is assistant professor of agricultural economics at Eduardo Mondlane University, Faculty of Agronomy and Forest Engineering. He received his BSc with honors degree in Agronomy from Eduardo Mondlane University, MSc in Agricultural Economics from University of Arkansas and his PhD degree in Agricultural Economics from Oklahoma State University. Currently João E. Mutondo is the director of the graduate degree program in Agronomy. His research interest areas are: environmental and resource economics, international trade, production economics as well as agricultural development.